Overview

Applied Arts is the application of decoration and design to ordinary objects to make them aesthetically appealing. Graphic Design is the art or skill of combining text and pictures in advertisements, magazines, or books. This BVA program prepares individuals to design applications for art and translate ideas into visual images. In this field, students study about drawing, layout and manipulating images for commercial and non-profit purposes. People who have obtained a degree in design and applied arts are often employed as designers, graphic designers, multimedia artists and animators.

Our Graphic Design and Applied Arts encompasses a variety of artistic fields, such as photography, painting and illustration. The Applied Arts term is applied in distinction to the fine arts which aims to produce objects which are beautiful or provide intellectual stimulation.

Generally speaking, design and applied arts can be defined as arts wherein objects are designed or fashioned in order to be used rather than simply to be viewed. Designing, creating and communicating - you can choose from a variety of job options that require skills in these artistic areas. Potential careers also include working as an artist, teacher, researcher, museum curator or art director. Depending on a student's concentration, job titles could also include painter, designer, stylist or writer. Many designers choose to focus on one or two particular areas, such as clothing, textiles, websites, floral arrangements, logos, home and office interiors or sets. Because the areas of design and applied arts offer so many different career opportunities, educational and other training requirements vary. One who hopes to work in an advertising firm is required to earn a degree, while a photographer may not.

Graphic designers plan, analyse and create visual images to communicate a message by combining practical knowledge and applied skills to create manual and computergenerated images to be used for commercial purposes to sell products and endorse services. They may use digital photography and photo printing to create graphic art. They begin by preparing sketches or models to illustrate the vision for their design, and at higher levels, will often supervise those who carry out their creations. Graphic artists produce the majority of all modern print media ranging from brochures, posters, advertisements, magazines and commercials. Most use computer programs that allow them to edit digital images efficiently.
